Sheriff Del Lewis, of Cochise county, was in town yesterday on his way to Phoenix with an insane man. Speaking of Stiles' escape at Casa Grande, the sheriff said that it was owing to the duplicity of the constable. He went there with the warrant to serve on Stiles, had the handcuffs on him and was about to chuck him when the officer told him that he would help watch Stiles if he would obtain from shackling him, which Lewis agreed to, then when Lewis got ready to go Stiles made a break for the back door and the officer got between Lewis and the door and Stiles got away. The sheriff said he placed confidence in the statement of the officer, and had every reason to believe he was acting in good faith. After he returned to Tombstone he learned about the discharge of Stiles on his own recognizance. He said he knew nothing of Stiles' whereabouts but believed he was at or near Casa Grande, where most everybody knew him, and feels friendly.—Tucson Star.

The Indian school at Rice is running with a full complement of teachers and with 160 pupils in attendance, 100 of whom are boys, says the Silver Bell. The number of girl scholars is soon to be increased to 100. The irrigating ditch taken out from the San Carlos river above will be completed within two weeks. It will irrigate a tract of 300 acres at the Rice school, to be cultivated as a garden to supply the Indian school with vegetables, and where they can be instructed in farming and gardening.

Henry Hought, who lives in under the rim of Tonto basin, brought to town on Saturday a young bear and a mountain lion, which were captured near his home when they were quite small, and has made pets of them. He sold the bear to Ernest Kellner, who will ship it to his brother at Phoenix.—Globe Silver Bell.

A Globetrotter who recently visited Safford relates that he had some business at a printing office and went to the Guardian office to see the editor on the devil, who were both out, but he found an angel in charge of the office, and he is old enough to know.

Santana Salaz, who has been in the employ of the company, for many years, was accidentally killed yesterday. He was looking after the ship which carries ore down into the well to clean it out. He loaded the ship with debris from the bottom and signalled to the engineer to hoist. The ship was hoisted several feet, when he gave the signal to stop, and it was stopped. The ship was provided only with friction brakes, hence it came down rapidly, badly crushing Salaz, who lived only a few hours after the accident happened.—

Amusements

A MAN OF MYSTERY.

The real test of the season is in store for our theater goers on night, Thursday, January 31, at the opera house, where Leary & Hagen present their great, logical, up-to-date society melodrama, "A Man of Mystery," by Mark E. Swan. Mr. Swan's name is guarantee for the merit of the piece as his plays, "Brown's in Town," "Whose Baby Are You?" etc., have made him famous as a playwright, while the firm of Leary & Hagen have never allowed their names to be connected with anything but the biggest and best successes on the stage.

In "A Man of Mystery" the climax of melodrama art has been reached. Stronger than "The Ruby" better than "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" and greater than "The Great Ruby" was the verdict of the New York Journal. Packed houses everywhere greeted this great melodrama in all the large eastern cities last year, and this is the first time the piece has ever been taken into the smaller cities of the country.

The play deals with the nefarious dealings of a rich and powerful man, a vicious thief, who poses as a society man and a philanthropist and swindles and robs his friends and benefactors, not through the ordinary channels employed by such scoundrels, but through his mastery of the science of hypnotism. The exciting details of his last crime, escape and final detection are graphically portrayed and form the strongest combination of events imaginable, from a dramatic and poetic point of view. The heart interest is intense and the comedy element never lacking. The climaxes are the strongest ever attempted upon the stage, and literally lift the audience from their seats with excitement. The company is probably the strongest taken all in all, that there is on the road. It is headed by these gifted and justly famous artists, Forest Flood and Miss Marie Shepard, while Lew Kelly, the funniest of all funny comedians, has been especially engaged for the role of Noah Lott. It is a play for the people and never fails to please. No such play or comedy as this has visited this section of the country in many years.

The transcontinental tour season 1900-1901, of the distinguished young violinist, Leonora Jackson, supported by a strong company of artists, including Josephine Ethelma, soprano, and Golden Pratt, pianist, the management takes pride in being able to offer not only one great artist, but such a combination of artists as will constitute the strongest musical attraction before the public this season.

The fame of Leonora Jackson is so universal that she ranks at the age of twenty-one among the greatest virtuosos of the world. Her extraordinary career the past four years in Europe and America has been a succession of victories. Her triumphs as a lady violinist she is acknowledged beyond question the peer. Miss Jackson and her company of artists will appear at Doris theater February 6. Seats will be on sale to subscribers February 4 at the box office 9 o'clock a. m. Prices, $1.50, $1.00 and 50 cents.

LEOPOLD GODOWSKY.

The following press notices in regard to the concert given by Leopold Godowsky, in Berlin, on December 6, and translated from Berlin newspapers of following dates:

Leopold Godowsky had an overwhelming success in his concert at the Beethoven hall on Thursday evening, December 6. Assisted by the Philharmonic orchestra, under the direction of Rebeck, who accompanied exceedingly well, Mr. Godowsky played the Brahms Concerto, op. 15, in D minor, and the Tchaikovsky Concerto with masterly musicianship and the most absolute command of the resources of the piano. In the initial movement of the Brahms Concerto his serious, albeit refined and poetical playing won the audience, and after that everything was heard with increasing enthusiasm until the final allegro con fuoco of the Tchaikovsky piece, which was given with great power and dazzling brilliancy. At the close of this movement the artist met with an ovation, and in response to energetic recalls, he played with orchestra, the scherzo of Saint-Saens' Concerto in G minor.

This was given with exquisite purity and a limpid clarity quite beyond description. In spite of the importance and masterly rendition of the two concert pieces, however, the interest of the public was unquestionably centered in the group of Godowsky's own studies based on Chopin's études, which constituted the second number of the programme. There were seven of these transcriptions, and, as they proceeded the audience afforded an interesting study. At first an expectant curiosity blended with incredulity; this gave way to amazement and then to enthusiasm, as, with complete nonchalance, the artist disposed of difficulties beside which the transcendental studies of Liszt or Charles Alkan are bagatelles. And this was no mere technical display. Not only was there the most incredible versatility, but everything was beautifully musical—not volcanic, but rather idyllic or elegiac music, all infused with a tranquil peace that was delightful to a spirit tired of the impatient thumping we too often hear instead of piano playing. When one comes to discuss the means—the playing machinery, one soon finds one's self in terra incognita, for Godowsky's technique is a new technique. You recognize everything you are familiar with, and much more. There is often an independent leading of three distinct singing voices, accompanied by the most elaborate instrumentation; a facility in the playing of double notes merely legendary until now; absolutely no left hand, that weaker member now speaking with the authority and eloquence of two right hands. What is best of all, there is absolute harmonic clarity accomplished by an unprecedented fluency in the use of the pedals. It is to be hoped that this great pianist will give some recitals here this season in order that the public may have the opportunity to study other phases of his art.—W. L. Calkoun, in the German Times.

A GOOD THING.

German Syrup is the special prescription of Dr. A. Boschee, a celebrated German physician, and is acknowledged to be one of the most fortunate discoveries in Medicine. It quickly cures Coughs, Colds and all Lung troubles of the severest nature, removing, as it does, the cause of the affection, and leaving the patient in a strong and healthy condition. It is not an experimental medicine, but has stood the test of years, giving satisfaction in every case, which its rapidly increasing sale every season confirms. Two million bottles sold annually. Boschee's German Syrup was introduced in the United States in 1868, and is now in every town and village in the civilized world. Three doses will relieve any ordinary cough. Price 75 cents. THE POPCRAFT SONG.

"Your dinner pail's too heavy,"
Said the Free-Trade, free soup man.
"Your stomach's overloaded
With bread and beef and ham.
Free trade will soon relieve you
Of surplus food and pay
And clothing, and you then may loaf
Many and many a day."

"Then walk into my parlor
Without the slightest fuss,
And take a little Free-Trade soup
And always vote for us."
Such was the popcraft song,
Which seemed so very witty;
But to the polls the people rushed
And elected Bill McKinley.

From his success in giving the little folks what they want we must infer that Santa Claus is one of the best mind readers in the business.—Puck.

BEAT OUT OF AN INCREASE OF HIS PENSION.

A Mexican war veteran and prominent editor writes: "Seeing the advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, I am reminded that as a soldier in Mexico in '47 and '48, I contracted Mexican diarrhoea and this remedy has kept me from getting an increase in my pension for on every renewal a dose of it restores me." It is unequalled as a quick cure for diarrhoea and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.
